

The duck hunting season opens in California—and the hunting is done by airplane. These successful hunter-aviators shot as many as the law allowed.

© Keystone View Co.

Funeral procession of the late mayor of Cork, Ireland. Photo shows MacSwiney's casket covered with flowers and guarded by Irish Volunteers in uniform. Requiem high mass was held at St. George's Cathedral, Southwark.

© Keystone View Co.

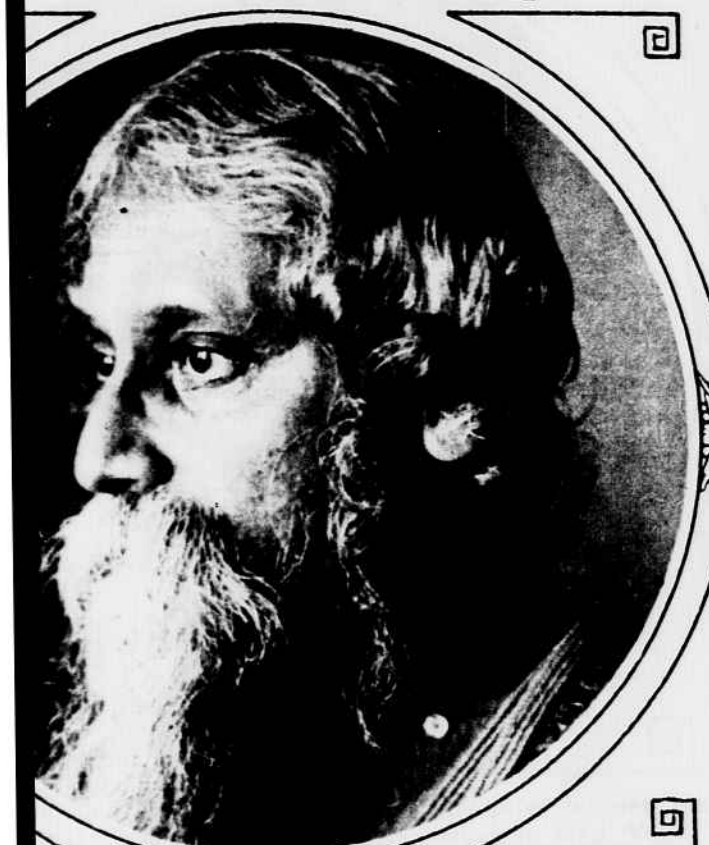

All dolled up for any sort of a scrap! This walking arsenal is a soldier of Kemal Pasha, leader of the Turk nationalists, and he is prepared to hold off any small sized army until his provisions fail him.

Wide World photo.

A French frock being exhibited in New York is composed of a number of panels over tiny beads of many colors blend into the panels, the latter extending from the ankles. The hat is of black satin with trimming.

© Underwood & Underwood.

... famous Indian poet and Nobel prize winner, who died a few days ago. Photo taken in New York.

© Paul Thompson.

Europe's latest royal wedding united the Duke of Alba and the Marquesa San Vincente del Barco. The bridegroom is a nephew of the late Empress Eugenie. The wedding took place at the Spanish embassy in London.

Wide World photo.

Hugh Robinson and son Harold of Keyport, N. J., who have talked across the Atlantic ocean with an amateur wireless outfit. Their latest message came from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, 3,500 miles away.

© Keystone View Co.

Chefs of New York's hotels take part in flapjack contest, one of the events of the National Hotel Men's Exposition. According to a famous chef, the recipe is only half the art of a flapjack; the other half is the way it is handled, the knack of "flipping."

International Film Service